Rain contributes to fatality on KY 245

ERIN L. MCCOY

emccoy@kystandard.com

One man was killed and another injured in a two-vehicle collision Wednesday morning on KY 245.

Shaun R. Barlow, 21, Louisville, died in the accident. He was not wearing a seat belt, according to a press release from the Nelson County Sheriff's Department.

The accident occurred at 9:07 a.m. as rain fell on slick Nelson County roads and heavy storms approached the area.

Cory R. Spalding, 26, Cox's Creek, was transported to Flaget Memorial Hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. He was wearing a seat belt.

Barlow was driving a red Ford Taurus toward Bardstown on KY 245 when he apparently lost control on the wet road, Bardstown-Nelson County Fire Department Interim Chief Marlin Howard said. The accident took place north of Flaget Hospital on KY 245, according to a press release from Nelson County Coroner Field Houghlin.

"The red car hydroplaned on some water and started spinning in the roadway, crossed the center line and actually spun around to where it was turned backwards," Howard said. The sheriff's department confirmed this report, stating that Barlow's car was traveling south while facing north.

It came into the path of Spalding's blue Ford Mustang, which was traveling north from Bardstown and was unable to stop, Howard reported. The Mustang struck the rear of Barlow's red Ford.

"They hit hard enough that the Mustang took the rear bumper of the red car and pushed it underneath of the trunk area," Howard explained. "Everything that was in the trunk got pushed into what had originally been the rear seat area, so it pushed the rear seats into the front seats and had the gentleman pinned."

Two vehicles collided on KY 245 north of Flaget Memorial Hospital at 9:15 a.m. Wednesday. One man was pronounced dead at the scene.

Nelson County escapes storm damage

ERIN L. MCCOY

emccoy@kystandard.com

Nelson County escaped much of the flooding and damage suffered by Hardin and LaRue counties during Wednesday morning's rash of storms and tornado warnings.

The only damage reported to emergency agencies was a downed tree on KY 733.

"We had one lane partially blocked," Nelson County Sheriff Stephen Campbell said.

A two-vehicle accident killed Shaun Barlow, 21, Louisville, around 9:05 a.m. Wednesday on KY 245. That accident was attributed to the weather, as Barlow's vehicle hydroplaned into the opposing lane.

However, Nelson County's first tornado warning was issued shortly before 10 a.m., two more warnings were issued before the last expired at 12:21 p.m. Wednesday.

National Weather Service Meteorologist Ted Funk said the most powerful storm system to hit Nelson County passed through at 11:20-11:30 a.m. That storm passed through Hodgenville, injuring one person and damaging buildings, before crossing the southern tip of Nelson County.

"The circulation with that storm — that looks like it may have produced a tornado in Hodgenville," Funk said Wednesday afternoon, though NWS personnel were still gathering information at that time. Television stations reported winds in excess of 100 mph in Hodgenville, but that has not been confirmed, Funk said. However, he acknowledged, "That was probably the strongest storm that crossed Nelson."

New Haven, Bardstown and New Hope appeared to be in the path of that storm, but no damage or injuries from that area had been reported as of 4:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Storm water accumulated quickly along Stephen Foster Avenue during Wednesday morning's heavy rains. The worst of the weather was to the south and east of Bardstown, however, where tornado touchdowns were confirmed in LaRue and Hardin counties.

The NWS hadn't received any information specifically from Nelson County by Wednesday afternoon. However, Funk estimated that rainfall in parts of northwest and north central Nelson County may have received as little as a quarter-inch of rain.

However, the far northern and the southern half of Nelson County below Bardstown could have received 1-2 inches, he said, excluding the county's extreme southern tip.

A flood warning issued for the county expired at 3 p.m., with a tornado watch in effect most of the day expiring at 9 p.m.

Aside from the sheriff's department, other emergency agencies in Nelson County reported no known problems related to the extreme weather.

"(There was) nothing major other than I think we had a couple accidents related to the heavy rain," Nelson County Emergency Management Agency Director Joe Osborne said.

Between 10-11 a.m. a funnel cloud sighting was reported in the Deatsville area, but Osborne said he was unable to verify that

More storms for Friday?

The Storm Prediction Center has placed most of Kentucky at "moderate" risk for severe storms beginning Friday. Violent storms and strong, long-tracked tornados are possible across the region, especially Friday afternoon. "This is one of the most dangerous situations I have seen in some time and I strongly urge everyone to begin preparations now," Christian County Emergency Management Weather Coordinator David Powell said.

Indoor gun range seeks city approval

ltolliver@kystandard.com

An indoor shooting range may be the next step for one local business owner.

But before construction starts, Patrick Hayden, owner of Keene's Depot on Old Bloomfield Pike, came before Bardstown City Council Tuesday during its regular meeting to make sure his plans are not in violation of any city ordinances.

The city does have an ordinance prohibiting the discharging of a firearm within the city limits, but Bardstown Mayor Bill Sheckles believes it refers to shooting outdoors. An indoor shooting range would not fall under that category, he said.

Hayden said his desire was to get the situation ironed out before construction on the shooting range began.

"It's not a cheap investment," Hayden told the council. "I don't want to build it and get jammed up."

Though Sheckles didn't think the gun range would be a problem, he told Hayden City Attorney Tom Donan would research the ordinance and someone from City Hall would get back in touch with Hayden.

Pending industrial hemp legislation could go to pot

bbowman@lcnj.com

Two bills in state legislation for the legalization of industrial hemp could offer a transition crop for farmers in Nelson County. Central Kentucky was the largest producer of hemp during World War II for rope production, but state officials say it isn't legislation but law enforcement that will decide hemp's future in the state or Nelson County.

Hemp has been looked at as alternative energy source in the past, according to Nelson County Extension Agent, Ron Bowman.

"If it was feasible at all, we would have to be closer to the actual power plants," Bowman said. "It all depends on the price of the product, what would it cost to ship it and whether our farmers can actually make money from it."

Industrial hemp is a non-psychoactive variety of the Cannabis sativa plant. Given its low THC content, it would not be attractive as a recreational drug like mar-

BARDSTOWN CITY COUNCIL

New Bardstown fire chief could be named soon

LISA TOLLIVER
ltolliver@kystandard.com

A fire chief for the Bardstown Fire Department could be named as early as next week, according to Bardstown Mayor Bill Sheckles.

Bardstown City Council met in executive session Tuesday night to discuss the applicants for the post. A search committee had already narrowed down about 12 applications to three before the executive session.

Though no action was taken after the session, Sheckles said he hopes to make a decision this week and then make it known to Bardstown City Council members during their next working session, which is Tuesday.

The selection process comes after the city passed a new ordinance for how a fire chief will be selected. Under the new ordinance, the city fire chief will now be appointed by the mayor, matching the process for the selection of other departments within the city. In the past, the fire chief was voted in by members of the Bardstown Fire Department, which has nine paid members plus volunteers, and the Bardstown-Nelson County Volunteer Fire Department, a non-profit corporation comprised strictly of volunteers, before being appointed by the mayor. This led to two fire chiefs serving at the same time this year. Anthony Mattingly, who had been chief since 2005, was serving as chief of both fire departments when corporation fire department volunteers voted for Marlin Howard for corporation chief.

Sheckles saw a problem with having two chiefs over the same group of firefighters and proposed a new ordinance that would clarify the selection process for chief.

The ordinance also requires the corporation to be led by the same chief as the Bardstown Fire Department in order for the corporation to continue operating on city property and in the same fire station at the Bardstown Fire Department. The ordinance eliminates the fire department's long-held practice of voting for its chief.

Howard is serving as interim fire chief until a new chief is announced.

A six-member search committee narrowed down the field of applicants to three. The search committee is comprised of the three City Council members on the safety committee — Roland Williams, Bobby Simpson and Francis Lydian — two members of the fire departments and Assistant City Administrator Larry Green.

Cemetery rates increase

A looming increase in cemetery rates created a rash of plot purchases for the city recently.

At its regular meeting Tuesday, the Bardstown City Council approved 29 cemetery deeds, including two for Bardstown City Council member Tommy Reed and his wife. Reed recused himself from the vote on his own cemetery deeds.

The increase in the number of cemetery deeds comes on the heels of the first reading two weeks ago of an ordinance increasing the cost of the plots and the opening and closing of graves. The new rates, which were approved on second reading Tuesday night, are now in line with the cost of plots for St. Joseph Cemetery. The two cemeteries sit side by side on North Third Street.

The ordinance increases the costs for plots near the front of the city cemetery, near North Third Street, from $400 to $500. The cost for plots farther back in the cemetery will increase from $350 to $450. Other increases include the opening and closing of graves from $250 to $400. Opening a grave for an urn will increase from $100 to $150; the cost of a baby grave will change from $50 to $150; and the cost of opening a baby grave will increase from $100 to $150.

The ordinance also changes the title of the Public Works Director to the Public Works Superintendent. It's strictly a change in title, Sheckles said. The duties and salary remain unchanged.

In other news, the council:

- Approved a Development Review Board recommendation brought by Flaget Memorial Hospital for a 3,600-square-foot modular storage building.

- Approved a new sign for the Days Inn franchise at 523 N. Third St. According to owner Ghunshyum Patel, the replacement sign will read "Downtown Super Inn" and will be modified to incorporate the word "Downtown" with a red stripe underneath instead of a yellow one.

- Approved a request recommended by the Bardstown Historical Review Board for owner Frank Souza to extend a shed roof on his property near the rear of 111 E. Broadway Ave.

- Approved a request recommended by Bardstown Historical Review Board for Susan Christensen to construct an attached pergola to the south side of her townhouse at 211 N. Fourth St.

- Approved two requests recommended by Bardstown Historical Review Board for JTD Holdings LLC to remove the corrugated metal siding from the sides and rear of the Dempsey Building at 211 W. Stephen Foster Ave. and to construct a four-bay, two-story, Colonial style, double-door duplex at 208 E. Broadway Ave. Council member Joe Buckman recused himself from the vote because of he is one of the owners of JTD Holdings LLC.

- Approved the reappointments of Todd Johnson to the planning commission for a four-year term, Guthrie McKay to the Cable TV Programming Committee for a three-year term and Clara Mackin Fulkerson to the Wickland Board for a one-year term.

- Welcomed Boy Scout Troop 142 to the City Council meeting.

Man allegedly discovered drunk inside stolen truck

STAFF REPORT

A Louisville man was arrested Wednesday for allegedly being intoxicated in a truck police later learned was stolen.

Ricky Allen Montgomery, 31, had allegedly parked a silver

Ricky Montgomery

Nissan Frontier at a construction site on KY 245 just south of Templin Avenue. The engine and lights were off when Officer Nathan Phillips discovered him there at about 12:54 a.m., according to a press release from the Bardstown Police Department.

Montgomery was arrested for alcohol intoxication in a public place and taken to the Nelson County Jail. The vehicle was checked through the National Crime Information Center but had not been reported stolen at the time, and it was left at the scene.

However, the Louisville Metro Police Department informed Bardstown Police later that morning that the same vehicle had been reported stolen at 8:07 a.m. It was reportedly stolen overnight, and the victim hadn't discovered it missing until the next morning.

The vehicle was recovered from the construction site. The case will be presented to a Nelson County Grand Jury, the press release states.

As of Thursday morning, Montgomery was only facing an alcohol intoxication charge.

Hayden hopes to build the indoor gun range at Keene's Depot's new location. Hayden is in the process of purchasing the former Clark Distributing building at 401 Glenwood Drive off Filiatreau Lane, which is within city limits. Since 1946, Keene's Depot has been within Bardstown city limits and Hayden said he would like to remain within city limits if possible.

"I was born and raised here. I like the place," Hayden said.

The new location, which Hayden hopes to be in within the next three months, is more than three times the size of Keene's current location. The building on Old Bloomfield Pike is 10,000 square feet, while the new building is 32,000 square feet. Once he moves, Hayden said the old location would be put up for sale or lease.

Hayden said the retail space of Keene's Depot would remain about the same size, but the additional space would allow for the indoor gun range plus a warehouse and distribution facility for his online business, Kentucky Gun Co. The increase in business for Hayden has primarily come from the growth of his website, www.kygunco.com. Hayden uses mini-warehouses in and outside the state to store his inventory for his online business, but the additional space would allow him to consolidate

LISA TOLLIVER/The Kentucky Standard

Keene's Depot owner Patrick Hayden came to the Bardstown City Council meeting Tuesday to discuss his hope to add a shooting range to Keene's new location.

some of that storage at his new location.

It would also allow him to grow his business in a new direction as an importer of firearms. Hayden is in the process of getting an importer's license from the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearm Division. If that happens, Hayden would be the only importer in Kentucky.

"Instead of getting guns by the case, I would be getting them by the container," Hayden said.

With an importer's license, Hayden would become a distribution point for a wholesaler group of about 300 business groups.

While Hayden hopes to move Keene's Depot to its new location in about three months, the indoor gun range would open another 3-6 months down the road after the move. He sees several benefits of the range, including offering local citizens a place to train, practice and utilize their firearms and a place local law enforcement could use to qualify in shooting.

Bardstown Police Chief Rick McCubbin said officers now have to travel to Elizabethtown to qualify about twice a year.

The range would be designed in accordance with National Shooting Sports Foundation regulations. Although it's not a requirement, Hayden said designing it with those regulations in mind gives the gun range some accreditation and helps on insurance rates for the business. The range would capture all noise inside the building with no noise being expelled from the facility. The noise requirements are EPA- and OSHA-regulated, Hayden said.

ijuana, but the stigma has helped stop its legalization.

Hemp studies have been initiated in the past, but the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration denied permits to the Dean of University of Kentucky's College of Agriculture Scott Smith.

"There are advocates on both sides of the issue," Smith said. "The ultimate question is whether hemp is an economic solution for farmers."

There isn't sufficient research on industrial hemp to discern whether it is economically viable for farmers, according to Smith. Research exists in Canada and Europe for production, but not the market research needed in the U.S., according to Smith. When the University of Kentucky and Kentucky State University were encouraged to research hemp production, Smith was denied by the DEA.

"We have studies on switch back grass and miscanthus grass which could be just as productive as hemp for an energy source, but we just don't know enough about it," Smith said.

Hemp could be the transition crop for local Nelson County tobacco farmers if research could support the crop as an economical and marketable product.

"There are a lot of unanswered questions out there about whether it is right for our farmers. If it can be used in all the different ways people claim that it can, farmers are interested," State Sen. Jimmy Higdon said. "We need the universities to research it and show that it can work, but we need law enforcement on board to make this happen."

The bills would require farmers to be licensed by the Department of Agriculture and pass a criminal history check by local sheriffs. Sheriffs would do random test inspections of hemp fields at a fee of $5 per acre with a minimum $150 fee. The money would be divided between the sheriff and agriculture departments.

The transition crop couldn't come soon enough for farming families looking for an alternative to tobacco, according to State Rep., David Floyd.

"It's a fact that we need to move tobacco farmers toward another crop," Floyd said. "A lot has been taken away from tobacco farmers. Years ago, tobacco fields put their children through school."

Industrial hemp is considered a controlled substance by the DEA. Bound by international treaty laws, the DEA can only legally grant one entity the permit to research cannabis in any form, according to DEA Public Relations Officer Barbara Carreno in Washington D.C. The University of Mississippi currently possesses the permit.

"Our main concern is security. We have security requirements that must be met in regards to researching controlled substances," Carreno said. "The university is required by law to regularly publish reports for compliance with security and research."

The permit is just one part of the process for legal research by any entity. The National Institute on Drug Abuse oversees the approval process, which requires the reports from an approved research group. The DEA doesn't approve or disapprove research, Carreno said.

States that have legalized medicinal marijuana are operating in violation of federal law. North Dakota has sued the DEA for the right to grow industrial hemp, Carreno said. The lack of legal research confuses the issue of industrial hemp and street marijuana sought after by drug users.

"Hemp is long and spindle-like," Smith said. "There is an argument that cross pollination would render an illegal plant grown in the same field with less than desirable levels of THC, but we don't have the research to support that."

The profitability of industrial hemp and the legal hurdles to produce the crop isn't lost on Kentucky Agricultural Commissioner James Comer.

"The U.S. is the only country that doesn't grow industrial hemp. North Dakota is suing the DEA because they can see the money being made in Canada," Comer said. "We will continue to educate people statewide to address the misinformation and the potential it has for our agricultural economy."

It is a cheaper crop for farmers to put out than crops such as corn grown for ethanol and it is greener. Industrial hemp doesn't require fertilizer, Comer said.

The crop could produce a significant contribution to the agriculture economy. It wouldn't be just an opportunity for farmers but the state, according to Comer.

"This could create manufacturing jobs. We have companies that would come here for manufacturing greener products to replace plastic for the automotive industry such as car dashes," Comer said.

The commissioner maintains an optimistic stance on the legality issues surrounding industrial hemp and its classification.

U.S. Representative for Texas's 14th congressional district, Ron Paul's introduction of H.R. 1831 would take industrial hemp out of the jurisdiction of the DEA by declassifying it as a controlled substance, according to Comer.

"This is truly a bipartisan issue," Comer said. "Everyone from the far right to the far left is on board to make this happen. We have to look ahead and we have everything we need without asking for money or raising taxes."

Nelson County EMS and Dispatch said they also did not have any weather-related runs.

have sustained significantly greater damage than the Mustang, though both sustained severe damage, according to the sheriff's office.

Firefighters had to remove a passenger door and part of the roof before they were able to remove Barlow through the passenger side of the red Ford, Howard said. At that time, firefighters were still treating him as a viable patient.

However, shortly after Nelson County EMS placed

Barlow in the back of an ambulance, it was determined he had died, according to Howard.

Upon arrival, Nelson County Coroner Field Houghlin pronounced Barlow deceased. His body was transported to the Louisville Medical Examiner's Office, where an autopsy was performed in hopes of determining the exact cause of death, a press release from the Coroner's office stated.

An ambulance transported Spalding to Flaget Hospital. Nelson County EMS confirmed that one person was transferred.

Are poodles, yorkies real dogs?

If I were God, I would've made people with delay devices on their mouths or a filter of some kind.

For example, when your brain wants to say, "Poodles aren't real dogs;" before it comes out of your mouth the delay device would kick in and send you a message: "Really? Is that really what you want to say in front of this group of people who may or may not include poodle owners?"

True story. I said that once in front of a group of women at a local church (which means I run into these women at the grocery store) and a woman in the front row raised her hand and said, "I have a poodle."

Crickets chirped in the silence for about five long seconds — and then she laughed. She didn't really have a poodle.

My immediate thought: Good. Now I don't have to move to Nebraska.

See, if we had filters, whenever someone would say, "Poodles aren't real dogs" it would come out, "Poodles are the greatest dogs God ever made."

But we don't have auto-filters, and I have a real problem with my mouth sometimes.

Recently, I said something in public that probably offended a few people who heard me and I didn't realize it until it was too late. I felt terrible, but it was a situation where I couldn't amend my

NANCY KENNEDY

words because it would've drawn attention to the people whom I may have offended and would've made things worse.

So, I went home and beat myself up thinking about all the unhelpful or hurtful things I've said in the past and that I'll surely say in the future and decided to join a convent where no one is allowed to speak at all, except I'd probably talk in my sleep and offend some nun who probably owns a poodle.

I told God (silently since I pretty much determined that my tongue is a lethal weapon) that I was really, really, really sorry and please don't fry me on the spot. If God rolls his eyes, I'm sure he did at that point as he reminded me of one of my favorite scriptures: "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just and will forgive us our sins and purify us from all unrighteousness"

(1 John 1:9).

I'm not normally this neurotic, but something else was bothering me. In a radio interview featuring Toni Birdsong, the author of the blog and book, "Sticky Jesus," about Christians sharing their faith online, she talked about "reckless" words and quoted Jesus who said, "On judgment day, people will have to account for every careless word they have spoken. By your words you will be found guilty or not guilty (Matthew 12: 36-37.)"

She echoed what I'd heard before. A church I went to years ago also taught that God would one day play back a movie of our lives and as we stand ashamed in front of him and the angels and everyone else, we would have to explain our thoughts, words and deeds and God would condemn or commend us on the spot.

I well remember being afraid to speak or even think, feeling condemned even before I opened my mouth, certain that God kept careful score.

Somehow, I missed what Jesus had really said — and to whom he was speaking. He was addressing the self-righteous religious leaders, whom he called a "brood of vipers" among other things. He was accusing them of all sorts of evil, especially their words.

But he wasn't addressing his followers. He wasn't talking to the ones who put their faith in him, who believed in him. He wasn't talking to us, we who call ourselves Christians.

After all, "Therefore there is now no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus" (Romans 8:1). The score has already been settled, including our speech. We are not condemned and never will be!

However, that doesn't mean we can speak recklessly. Our tongues can be lethal and still need to be bridled. We still need a filter. Thankfully, God has given us one.

We have his Spirit who whispers in our ears, "Not those words. Not that tone. Not here, not now."

It's up to us to listen — and heed the whispers.

Sometimes I hear too late, but many times I'm stopped in time. I hope I'm getting better at it.

For those I've ever offended, I really am sorry. And I don't have anything against poodles. However, I do have my doubts about Yorkies.

EDITORIAL

It's time for the legislature to get down to business

Now that the Kentucky Supreme Court has settled the question of the constitutional soundness of the proposed state senate and representative district lines that were supposed to reflect the population shifts in Kentucky, the seismic shift we expected has turned into less than a tremor. The courts say the General Assembly failed miserably in trying to carry out its duty to redraw the lines to keep the population of districts as uniform as possible without unnecessarily carving up counties into multiple pieces. Never mind the old lines were, by definition, also unconstitutional. The false start toward making some major changes in districts did serve one purpose, shaking up the status quo among office holders and seekers.

The Nelson County situation is a good example of what happens when the rules change in the middle of a process. When incumbent 50th district State Rep. David Floyd saw a chance to become State Sen. David Floyd in a newly redrawn Senate district that would include Nelson and Bullitt counties, he jumped at the opportunity.

Suddenly, the door was opened for someone new to step forward to run for the House representing Nelson. Nelson County Tea Party activist Donna Pegago saw an opening for her brand of conservative activism to find a larger stage and filed to run in the Republican primary. Former Bardstown Mayor Dick Heaton had decided to make a run for public office after surviving a bout with cancer and filed for the Democratic primary. Meanwhile Democrat Eddie O'Daniel, who had run against Floyd two years ago for his house seat, decided to take the plunge as a State Senate candidate. Some interesting races were starting to shape up until the Supreme Court stepped in and all bets were off.

After saying she would withdraw, Pegago decided she would stay in the race for representative and faces Floyd in the primary. The winner of that race will go against Heaton in November. State Sen. Jimmy Higdon remains our senator and because he was not facing an election this cycle he will not have to stand for re-election.

With the courts mandating district change but only if it passes constitutional muster, we can expect another round of jockeying for office in the not too distant future. It is likely that the idea of combining Nelson and Bullitt into a single Senate seat will be revived. Nelson County, with an ideal (for a House district) population of 43,000, is also likely to come to pass as a stand alone district.

When the new lines are drawn we can expect another round of Bullitt County candidates, Republican and Democratic, to step forward again. In the meantime with the distraction of who will be running against who in the primary and general election this year removed from the equation we hope the General Assembly can get down to the business of passing a budget and taking care of pressing needs such as tax reform.

For good or ill, it appears the constitutional amendment involving casinos in the commonwealth appears to be dead for this year even though polls indicated most people would have liked to have at least had the chance to vote on the matter. The administration's apparent overreach in crafting the gambling question to favor existing racetracks coupled with the on again-off again redistricting mess doomed the chance to at least get the question to the public.

Standard updates news in real time

Social media and the web have made it easier than ever for us to get the news to you quickly, and The Kentucky Standard may be accomplishing real-time news coverage better than ever before.

We wanted to let you know because, if you haven't yet noticed, a lot has changed at The Standard. In October 2010, our website got a sleek new redesign. In March 2011, we went "behind the wall," but that has not prevented a lot of our content from remaining free to view online. Slideshows of photos are posted weekly and year-round.

In September 2011, we joined Facebook and Twitter, and the ability to connect to our readers hour by hour — even minute by minute — has fundamentally changed the way we cover news.

Perhaps the most important of our free content is our breaking news coverage. We've made it a policy that all breaking news — particularly when it regards the health and safety of Nelson County citizens — will be free on our website.

We also try to make that coverage as immediate as possible. As heavy storms swept the county Wednesday morning, we updated our website constantly with news about tornado warnings and thunderstorms that were heading straight for the county. Once the storms passed, we checked with local agencies and PLG-TV 13's Tom Isaac — who was on the ground between Howardstown and New Haven during all three tornado warnings — to learn what impact the storms had on the county. Luckily, little damage was done. However, even before those storms began, a Louisville man, Shaun Barlow, 21, lost his life when he lost control of his car on KY 245. Those kinds of stories are difficult to cover, but just as we know every life is valuable, we think it's important to get you as much information on events such as this as soon as we can.

All our breaking news is updated with new information as we receive it. Another example took place Tuesday. Tom Isaac was the first reporter on the scene of Crume Drug Store, where FBI agents were executing a search warrant as part of a health care fraud investigation. By 8:45 a.m., updates to this story were being posted on The Kentucky Standard's Facebook and Twitter sites, while PLG viewers could view those updates on Channel 13. These stories were updated all day as we received new information on the incident.

Our website changes every day now; our Facebook and Twitter sites are updated daily, too. In fact, you could hardly call us a tri-weekly newspaper anymore, but instead something of a hybrid daily in the digital age. We're working hard to keep you informed of news as it happens, so we don't want anyone to miss out. Even if you're not a subscriber, check out our Facebook page, or stop by www.kystandard.com regularly. Absolutely all the content that's in the paper is available to read online for those who subscribe to the paper. The breaking news will be free, and localized to Nelson County in a way you can't find anywhere else. Maybe you know that already. But in case you weren't paying attention before, now is a good time.

Progress can't correct human nature

Beyond Rod Serling's "The Twilight Zone" and any of the "Alfred Hitchcock Presents," exists a sinister force which envelops time and people from our past. The stealthy scourge sneaks upon us like a parasite. It numbs our skin so we don't feel its sting until it finishes feeding off us. Afterwards we raise our heads discovering too late we lost both. Once we find a few crumbs of spare time that fell off the workbench, desktop and daily grindstone, we attempt to find the dear friends with whom we lost contact after high school, leaving a job, or moving away. The arduous process requires an extreme amount of ambition — especially for men.

Most men I know don't keep address books. In the past, our contact lists were recorded with a great amount of sophistication, which certainly baffled our better halves. Contacts were written in a short hand of hieroglyphics etched on the back of crumpled receipts and carefully stored in pants and jacket pockets. In time, these valuable manuscripts of commercial and personal transactions would graduate to the top of dressers or congregate in sock drawers. These sacred places ensured, in my male primate brain, safekeeping and organization. This process baffles other members of my household and is commonly mistaken for trash. I constantly defend the method and complex filing system. Nonetheless, the 21st century has given us cell phones and social media in which we now can digitally keep this information so as to find our dear lost acquaintances and communicate effectively with them. On a regular basis, my friends and I tweet, message and text each other of how we need to get together. We have crossed the barriers of time and space and have most certainly slain the sinister force I wrote of earlier.

For two years now, one of my friends and I have tried to arrange a time to get together. I have moved back home so now geography isn't a complication. I tweeted, texted and messaged him on Facebook about how I was now in the area so we could realistically figure it out. After 20 years, we have digitally reconnected and filled each other in on things. For those two years, time and geography were conflicting issues. We were both chefs with schedules too hectic for socializing. I messaged him of how now my schedule was a little more humane. We continued in this fashion off and on for the last several months to calculate a day, an afternoon or evening suitable for our male camaraderie. The sinister force seemed to still be hard at work thwarting our endeavors. Technology presents new tools for communication and, although less sophisticated than my previous system, helps me keep from losing my friend's contact information and we remain vigilant to get together. Despite these advances, the human element and sinister force, of course, continue to present obstacles in our progress.

Yesterday as I got into my car to drive to Bardstown, the sunshine allowed me to catch a rare glimpse of a neighbor I still hadn't met yet. The sinister force just hadn't allowed it. Both of us looked at each other simultaneously and laughed. My friend and I have lived next door from each other for the last seven months.

Pit bulls are not man's best friend

To the editor:
Pit bulls. What are they good for? Who in their right mind would want such an unpredictable and dangerous animal and call it a pet? BOYS' 5TH REGION TOURNAMENT

Eagles can't escape Bulldogs' clamps

John Hardin pulls away in 3rd quarter

CHUCK JONES
Landmark News Service

John Hardin tried a couple new wrinkles to speed up Bethlehem, but in the end, the Bulldogs turned to their defensive staples to do the job.

The Bulldogs used a 1-3-1 in the first quarter and their full-court pressure wasn't effective at first either until they went back to their man-to-man defense. The move paid off as the Eagles weren't able to play at the tempo they wanted.

Once John Hardin got the tempo in its favor, the Bulldogs got the game that way as well. They jumped out to a 13-point third-quarter lead and coasted to a 62-45 victory in the Boys' 5th Region Basketball Tournament quarterfinals Wednesday night at Central Hardin High School.

"We came out flat; we all came out flat," John Hardin senior Jeremy Harness said. "In the second quarter, we all got focused and started playing hard on both ends of the court. We started playing like we are capable and it was a good ending for us."

Harness and fellow guard Brandon Price caused major problems for Bethlehem's defense, combining for 33 points.

"It was in our plan to help on them, but we didn't help often enough," Bethlehem coach Artie Braden said.

The Bulldogs (20-8) advance to the region semifinals for the second time in four years and fifth time in eight years. They face the LaRue County Hawks (23-

7) at 6 p.m. Monday at Central Hardin. The Hawks routed Taylor County 73-53 on Wednesday.

Bethlehem's season comes to an end at 22-6, a win total that surprised Braden some.

"I thought after we played this summer we'd have several wins, (but) I didn't know it'd be this much," he said. "We feel like we've made some progress (as a program), but there's a whole lot more to be made."

John Hardin coach Mark Wells said he didn't want to allow Bethlehem to dictate the pace of the game, but he admitted the coaching staff might have made unnecessary adjustments or overthought it.

"We wanted to make them uncomfortable with our press, but we weren't effective because we weren't moving or aggressive," Wells said. "We thought our 1-3-1 would make them uncomfortable, but they adjusted after a few possessions. We went back to what we do well and that was our basic defense. I think we wore them down in the second half."

Bethlehem's triangle-and-two defense confused the Bulldogs in the first quarter. The Eagles tried to take away junior point guard Price and junior forward Daveon Greene. John Hardin struggled to crack the defense, committing three turnovers in the first two minutes and making only 5-of-12 shots from the field.

But with the attention being paid to Price and Greene, that left opportunities for other Bulldogs. Namely, Harness, who scored 16 and hit four of eight three-point tries.

"Some people think Jeremy's just a shooter, but he showed tonight he's a playmaker," said Price, who finished with 17 points and five assists.

It began to show in the second quarter. Trailing by three, Ervin Montgomery, who grabbed 10 rebounds, scored three straight points and Harness nailed a three-pointer to give John Hardin a 15-13 lead with 6:48 left before halftime.

Bass fishing added as varsity sport

Kentucky's lakes, rivers and streams have always been a haven for anglers and record-breaking catches. Starting with the 2012-13 school year, young anglers will have a chance to win something more — a high school state championship.

The KHSAA will add bass fishing as a varsity sport-activity starting next year, Commissioner Julian Tackett announced last week. Bass fishing will join bowling, which is holding its first KHSAA-sanctioned state championship in late March, and competitive cheer as sport-activities offered by the Association.

Kentucky becomes the second state nationally to offer bass fishing as a varsity sport, following Illinois. It will be offered in the spring with a regular season scheduled from late February through mid-April. The postseason and state competition will take place in late April.

"To say we are excited to sponsor bass fishing as a state championship sport-activity is an understatement," Tackett said. "Not only does it seem like a natural fit, given the number of Kentuckians of all ages who enjoy fishing and the outdoors, but it also allows us to reach one more group of students who may not already participate in an extra-curric-

Tigers' Jackson headed to Union College

PETER W. ZUBATY
pzubaty@kystandard.com

When C.J. Jackson joins the Union Bulldogs in the fall for football, coaches and fans there will see what Bardstown Tigers fans have gotten used to over the years.

"He plays with a high level of energy and emotion," Bardstown coach David Clark said of Jackson, a senior.

Jackson played a key role as the speed back in the Tiger backfield last season, a threat to score whenever he touched the ball, and his field vision also made him a dangerous part of the Bardstown return game.

"It's mind-breaking," Jackson said about the chance to carry on his football career at the next level. "I'm overwhelmed, excited, thankful."

Jackson did a lot of traveling when he was younger as part of a military family. He came to Bardstown from Fort Campbell four years ago and found his new home a welcoming one.

"I've got a lot of coaches who helped me since I moved here," he said.

Jackson plans to study business management while at Union, and he also will pursue one of his passions, video production.

"Education is going to help me out after football," he said.

Jackson said coaches at Union say he'll be in the mix at running back and special teams, but that he may also find himself at safety at times.

"I just need to get stronger," he said. "I need to work out in the weight room real hard to just get prepared" for the rigors of college practices.

Clark said adding muscle will be key for Jackson to get on the field quicker and into a contributing role.

"He's a hard worker on the football field and weight room," Clark said.

Jackson said maintaining his focus and studying film will play a big part a short jumper from the baseline and Harness drilled a 3-pointer from the right baseline to take a 22-17 lead. It was a lead the Bulldogs never relinquished.

Even when John Hardin turned the ball over while holding for the last shot of the half, which led to a layup by Eagle junior Jacob Browning, Harness quickly answered with a layup on the other end to lift John Hardin to a 29-25 halftime lead.

The second half was played to John Hardin's liking. Williams made a layup and then Montgomery did the same before Williams drained a three-pointer. Price made 3-of-4 free throws and Williams 1-of-2 to stretch the lead to 40-27 with 4:44 left in the third quarter.

"We came out aggressive the second half," Williams said. "We started off slow. It was huge to get out to a good start the second half. I wanted to. I made some silly fouls the first half. I wanted to come out and make an impact the second half."

Bethlehem used a 7-0 spurt to pull within 40-34 with 2:57 remaining and prompting Wells to call a 30-second timeout.

The Bulldogs responded with a game-clinching 10-0 run. Williams started the spurt with a layup off an inbound play. Greene made two free throws and Price made back-to-back layups.

Greene, who had 11 points and 11 rebounds, capped the run with a layup to push the lead to 50-34 with 5:51 remaining.

"That was a big momentum swing," Wells said. "I think that got the crowd back in the game. I told them good basketball players make plays and I think we did that the second half. We made plays."

Mudd led the Eagles with 12 points, while fellow senior Jalen Phillips added 10.

Overall, John Hardin hammered Bethlehem on the rebounding glass, 40-18.

"They've got size everywhere," Braden said. "We knew that was going to be a battle."

ular activity and give them a chance to be a part of a team. Representing your school and your community comes with great responsibility — keeping your grades up, staying out of trouble and setting an example for others. Not only do we hope to reward these students with a state championship event experience next year but we hope it fosters a lifelong love of the sport."

Much like youth programs already in place for bowling and archery, Tackett said the assistance the Association has already received from organizations such as The Bass Federation and youth director Mark Gintert, as well as FLW and Outdoors Operations Manager Dave Washburn has proven invaluable. The appreciation has been reciprocated.

"The Bass Federation is very excited to be working with the Kentucky High School Athletic Association and the FLW Outdoors to help bring high school fishing to the state of Kentucky," Gintert said. "These three organizations represent the forefront of youth fishing and athletics across the state and we can't wait to see the program grow as a result of this partnership."

The first state championship for bass fishing will be held at the Land Between the Lakes National Recreation Area. The area has already played host to numerous high school fishing tournaments, including last year's Murray State High School Fishing Open on Kentucky Lake, an event that drew 88 teams representing more than 50 Kentucky high schools.

The new sport-offering has already gained traction in the state as Terry Johnson, Executive Director of the Bluegrass State Games, also announced last week that bass fishing will join the full offering of sporting events at this summer's competition.

"We are very excited to partner with Murray State and FLW Outdoors to add high school fishing to the Bluegrass State Games," Johnson said. "We provide Kentuckians of all ages with a wide array of sports in which to compete and the momentum high school fishing will gain as a result of its addition as a varsity sport by the KHSAA makes it a natural fit."

Father is teaching son in the school of infidelity

DEAR ABBY: I have been married 18 years. In that time my husband has been unfaithful twice. Last week I was going through his cell phone and noticed from his emails that he had registered on a dating service and was exchanging photos with four women. I threw him out of the house.

What really upsets me is my 17-year-old son knew about the affairs and thinks it's perfectly normal for his dad to have female "friends" while we were still living together. I don't like what my soon-to-be-ex did to me, and I don't want my son thinking it's OK to start looking while you're still married.

My son finds ways to excuse his father's behavior. How can I make him understand that looking for other partners while you're married is being unfaithful?

JEANNE PHILLIPS

>> DEAR ABBY
Syndicated Columnist

member of the "boys club" and cliqued you out. Has your son not seen how painful this has been for you? Your almost ex-husband is a terrible role model. When your son follows in Dad's footsteps — and there is every reason to believe he will — he will never have a successful marriage of his own.

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend and I have been dating for four years. In the beginning, we'd split our visits between her house and mine because we live 100 miles apart.

Two years ago she stopped wanting me to come to her house. She'd say it was dirty or that she didn't want anyone there. When we plan to have me go there, the day arrives and she says she wants to break up with me because I insist on visiting her. During the past year and a half, I have been to her place only three times. She hemmed and hawed but finally allowed it.

She claims there's no reason she's acting this way, that I'm crazy and people are putting ideas in my head. I tell her it's her behavior that makes me think she's hiding something. What should I do?

SUSPICIOUS IN BUFFALO

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: Something strange IS going on. A drastic change in someone's behavior is legitimate cause for concern. Clearly your girlfriend has a secret. She may be seeing someone or there's something else she doesn't want you to see. You are overdue in getting to the bottom of it, so stop allowing her to put you on the defensive, even if it means ending the relationship.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 70 and I'm 68. We have been married for two years. His previous wife was 22 years younger than him, and he seems to delight in bringing the age thing up. I feel so old and insecure. Have you any words of wisdom to offer me?

THE OLD LADY

DEAR LADY: Two can play your husband's game. The next time he mentions it, tell him the reason she's his "ex" is that he was too old for her — which is why this time he wised up and picked on somebody "his own size."

>>HOROSCOPES

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ You are more on top of your work than you realize. The immense amount of work you have already cleared out allows you to head home early. Nearly everywhere you go, you might encounter the unexpected. Tonight: Order in.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Sometimes you underestimate how much you have to offer. Though a misunderstanding could arise from out of nowhere, stop and be aware of how much you care about people. Lady luck comes through regarding your ability to unravel a communication knot. Tonight: Early to bed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ You could feel as if you are out of control in the morning. You bounce from one item to another. Someone you counted on could disappoint you and create a last-minute flurry. Understand what you can and cannot do. Tonight: Join friends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ The unexpected occurs with a parent or higher-up. Know that you can handle it, no matter what occurs. Do not make a big deal of what goes on, as another party could become embarrassed later on. Be as gracious as possible. Tonight: Expect to be popular.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Play it low-key. Some of you might decide to cancel appointments or call it an early weekend. People will notice, but you simply might need some quiet time to get your work done or handle a personal matter. Tonight: A night out.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Consider alternatives in a meeting to resolve a problem concerning an associate. In fact, the issue could evolve in a meeting. Allow more brainstorming. You cannot always be so controlling! Make sure you are on budget. Tonight: Where people are.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ You could be off and tense about an appearance in the near future. You want to assume the lead, but complications in your dealings worry you. Relax and work with the unpredictable. Tonight: Could go to the wee hours.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ You might want to try another approach. Finish up some research, and realize when you cannot go any further. An element of the unexpected punctuates your plans. Be ready to regroup and rebuild. Tonight: Distance yourself from the day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ You might want to switch gears, partially because it is Friday, but also because a partner needs your time. Realize that you might disappoint others by not following your normal routine. A very fun but shocking happening occurs. Tonight: Dinner for two.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ What you thought you would do yesterday is far different from what you will choose today. Somehow, someone close to you can't seem to understand why you cannot be with him or her more. Tonight: Defer to a partner or loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ You could be left holding the bag when dealing with others. It seems that someone wants much more than you want to give. Do not be surprised when he or she acts out. Focus on getting what you need to get done. Tonight: Off to the gym, then home. Clear your mind.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ Others admire your intrinsically caring manner and enormous creativity. How you see a situation could change radically because of a sudden financial change. Verify what is happening first. Tonight: Be with your favorite person.
